If I were dancing on the shores of an island in the Galapagos who might I find? A blue-footed _____ with some very, fancy footwork indeed! Blue-footed boobies are sea birds with big, flashy blue _____ and yellow eyes. The birds dance together in a high stepping strut whistling and wiggling their wings. A mother booby lays two or three eggs in a hollow lined with twigs and pebbles that she and her mate build on the ground. Both parents take turns tending to the nest. They use their big, webbed feet to keep the eggs warm!

Blue-footed boobies are fantastic fisherman and love to eat fish! Fish is full of protein and vitamins that help keep the birds healthy. Do you like to eat fish?

Are you ready to do the blue-footed booby dance? Put on some music, kick your feet high in the air, and flap your arms!

Birds lay eggs and keep them warm.

There are lots of islands in the Galapagos. How many can you count?
